Clinic

The Entrepreneurship Legal Clinic at the University of Nebraska College of Law provides free representation and counsel to early-stage startup business clients throughout the State of Nebraska. Under supervision of Professor Brett Stohs, the Clinic's student "attorneys" interact directly with clients to provide legal counseling on a wide range of business law issues. By assisting entrepreneurs when they need help the most, Nebraska Law students are given hands-on opportunities to make a difference in the development of Nebraska businesses.

Cline Willams Director of the Entrepreneurship Legal Clinic

The Entrepreneurship Legal Clinic serves as capstone experience for third year law students interested in the practice of transactional law. Students have all of the responsibilities incumbent upon attorneys in a small law firm practice, including direct client advice and communications, matter management, multitasking, networking and outreach. Clinic clients include early-stage entrepreneurs, innovators, and start-up businesses located throughout the State of Nebraska.
